

HIGH LIVING IN GERRY ROOMS.

BEDS AND BREAD AND JELLY FOR CHRIS, STEVE AND HENRY.

Besides, they punched the Nigger and played Tag. Marvella worked by Koss and Water. Nicker, the Brass Ringed Bandit Chief, Fades Into a Myth.

Three of the four youngsters arrested on Tuesday for stealing brass rings from a jewelry store, responded in the West side court yesterday after a fourth arrest in the Gerry society rooms at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third street. Even their own mothers would hardly have recognized them, so effectively had soap and water and clean clothes altered their appearance. John Cavanaugh, the young member of the quartet, was so missing and little that Justice Duval, in the Children's Court, turned over to his mother's care. The brother, Christopher, 11 years old, Stephen Leonard, 9 years old, and Henry Farrell, 14, were held to be used as witnesses against James Wade of 588 Tenth Avenue, the junk dealer who, it is alleged, bought the stolen rings from the boys. His case was again postponed.

As the little prisoners sat on a bench in the prison corridor their clean faces seemed to light up the dingy place. On Tuesday morning the boys were the first of the heavy eating of top soil. Little Steve, the nine-year-old, was the brightest of the lot.

"Goed de Gerries is bully," he exclaimed. "You give you bread an' jelly an' a cup of coffee about this big"—holding his hands a foot apart.

"You letcher," chimed in eleven-year-old Christopher. "I had four slices. An' you got bread an' butter, too."

"See me new shirt," said Steve again, exhibiting a brand new garment of blue flannel.

"I guess I got one, too," chimed in Christopher, throwing a chest.

"But you didn't get no new undershirt," retorted Steve, unbuttoning his new blue shirt. "That's where I wiped my hands after eatin' bread and jelly," he laughed; pointing to some long smears on the clean white undershirt. "Dat's better dan me other. I had a man's shirt on yesterday."

"Well, I got a new hat," said Chris de-finitely.

"Taint as good as mine anyway," was the reply, and both youngsters held up new headgear.

Farrell, meanwhile, sat in dignified silence at the end of the bench. Such juvenile enthusiasm was beneath the dignity of his years.

"What did you think of it?" he replied. "It taint no good," he said. "You can't get out an' dey have watchmen dat keep you in bed. I'd a jumped out de window if it was so high it 'd a killed you to drop."

"What did you do down there?" asked the prison keeper.

"I was in the big cage. De teacher don't do nothing but hit 'em on de head with her book. I don't have to keep still in school neither. Dere was a Chinik an' a dag at a night an' dey punched de Chinik out de nigger."

"Did you have a bed to sleep in?" asked an interested listener.

"I had a bed," replied little Steve. "You bet we did—a whole bed all alone; in a night-dress dat came up to here," indicating his chin.

"How did you like the nightdress?"

"I was nice and warm—an' we played far all over de beds," he added as an after thought. Then he suddenly began to giggle. "Will dey let me out when I'm 21?" he asked.

"If you are a good boy," he was told.

"Well, me mudder's goin to put me in a honkey tonk, I'll bet," he said.

"She? Honkey tonk?" asked a cop.

"Yes, she don't want me now. She's got a baby. What more does she want?"

Little Steve was a big talker on his face. One of them shows where half his cheek was torn loose. He was asked about them.

"I was shot with a gun," he said. "I fell on a razor-knife an' got dem," pointing to the two smaller scars. "Dis one's where a train hit me. You see how boys stole the four bottles of beer?" he asked.

Instantly each one's finger pointed at his neighbor, like the characters in Nast's famous cartoon. Questions as to who took the brass rings met pretty much the same answer.

The attitude of the three was plainly indicated by the question. "Are dey goin' to let Chris go? Cause if dey do dey don't let us out, too, we're going to knock de thieves outen him," to which doctrine the 14-year-old Henry cheerfully subscribed.

Their story about being put up to stealing the rings by Christopher's big brother, Mickie, who was a years old, proved to be wholly a myth. Mickie had been rounded up in the night, but Mickie was only 12 and so half so aggressive as his brother, who was 14.

Superintendent Parker and Assistant Superintendent Custer were in court with the stolen rings to represent the railroad. They said they didn't feel like plucking the case and it is likely the courts may discharge the boys or place them for a time under the care of some institution.

COTTON MILLS ADVANCE WAGES.

The two mills employ 600 hands. This is a restoration of a cut made a year ago last July. It came unsolicited.

POSTUM CEREAL.
OUT THE DEMON.
A Tussle with Coffee.

There is something fairly diabolical in the way coffee sometimes wrecks its fiendish malice on those who use it.

A lady writing from California says:—
"My husband and I, both lovers of coffee, suffered for some time from a very annoying form of nervousness, accompanied by most frightful headaches. In my case there was eventually developed some sort of affection of the nerves leading from the spine to the head."

"I was unable to hold my head up straight, the tension of the nerves drew it to one side, causing me the most intense pain. We got no relief from medicine, and were puzzled as to what caused the trouble. It was a friend suggested that possibly the coffee we drank had something to do with it, and advised that we quit it and try Postum Coffee."

"We followed his advice, and from the day that we began to use Postum we began to improve, and in a very short time both of us were entirely relieved. The nerves became steady once more, the headaches ceased, the muscles in the back of my neck relaxed, my head straightened up and the dreadful pain that had so punished me when I used the old kind of coffee vanished."

"We have never resumed the use of the old coffee, but rely on Postum every day as well as we did the former beverage. And we are delighted to find that we can enjoy the coffee, and that we can, something as the doctor said, 'do it with the old kind of coffee.' Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich."

Postum Coffee contains absolutely no drug of any kind, but believes the coffee doctor from the old drug police.

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

A New York traveling man who has just returned from a two weeks trip up State says that if the cooks in the hotels and boarding houses had conspired to do no coffee than was set before him everywhere he went. So at last he decided to seek lodging at a private house. He succeeded, and when he sat down to his first meal he bowed his head, all un mindful of his surroundings, and muttered:

"Holy Moses, I hope this coffee is good!"

The host, who sat at his elbow, responded "Amen," and then he proceeded in silence.

Later, fearing that he might have appeared sacrilegious, the traveling man told his host that his supplication regarding coffee was a spontaneous outburst and was not intended as a formal blessing.

"I realized that," said the man of the house, "and I was only echoing your sentiment. I have had but one cup of good coffee since I have been married and I got that in New York."

A brand new style of grafter is working successfully in the Bronx and elsewhere, this man's particular victims being physicians.

The man calls on his selected victim and tells a story of some imaginary ill. The doctor makes an examination and then, to his great surprise, discovers that the man's heart is on the right side of his body.

The patient is seemingly very much alarmed. The doctor becomes interested in the case and immediately makes his strike, never for less than $2, generally for $5, and leaves with the money, promising to call again for further examination. He never comes back.

One of the physicians of the Bronx who was caught this way said yesterday that he had been victimized by the man on the right side, but in no way seems to affect his belief in his perfectly healthy. It is just a freak of nature. If my brethren are as easy as I am, they can easily see how it is good graft for him.

"Restaurant Keeper Martin is not the first late employer on Tuesday night by prize to his married employees each time the store pays them a visit," said a man who now makes New York his home. "There was a newspaper proprietor in my town some years ago," he added, "who was well known for his philanthropy. Every time any of his employees had an increase in the family he would write a check for $25 and give it to the lucky fellow."

"The visitor mentioned something about 'baby boy'." In a little while the man stood in front of the owner. He got some advice on the right of house and the duties of a father, and the customary $25.

"A few days later the secretary, looking over the disbursements marked 'Anti-race suicide' was amazed at an entry something like this:

Feb. 1st. John Smith, boy, $25.
May 5th. John Smith, boy, $25.

"A visit to the composing room showed that the 'John Smith' had left for the West some time before."

A man's heart candy business which now employs hundreds of persons and has shops in the large cities throughout the country had its origin in a children's party which was given in Greenwich Village forty odd years ago. About half a dozen of the small folk of the neighborhood were asked to celebrate the birthday of a little chap whose father was the proprietor of a small bakery. In order to give variety to the feast, the mother made some taffy, "old fashioned yellow taffy" it is now called. She made much more than the youngsters could eat, and the next day she placed the surplus in the window of the bakery for sale. The means of the city had the taffy exploited and the supply soon went. A demand for yellow taffy had been created, and gradually other "homemade candies" were added to the stock. The descendants of the original maker of the yellow taffy now carry on the business.

In the morning mail was the following note written on a postal card:

DEAR SIR: Last spring you wanted us to furnish you with a pair of wings, and also a tail for artist's purposes. Kindly let us know whether you want them now or not. Yours truly, John Smith.

The man to whom this was addressed wondered how he could have given any one an idea that he desired wings and a tail. After a pause for the question for twenty-four hours, he remembered that a friend of town, a painter, had asked him to look for wings that he desired for a painted Mercury. While he was making a selection at a taxidermist's, a fine specimen of a hawk arrived by express, and he had ordered the wings and tail feathers. The postal card was the taxidermist's way of making known the fact that the hawk wings and tail were cured and ready for delivery.

FAIR RAIDED AGAIN.
Judges of Track Events and Two Ticket Takers Taken In and Races Stopped.

The police rearrested yesterday afternoon the judges of the racing events at the Richmond County track, and also the two ticket takers, released under $500 bail for examination this morning. The two ticket takers arrested on Tuesday were also taken in. The arrests followed the discharge earlier in the day of the four judges and the two ticket takers by Magistrate Croak. The accused had counsel, but Magistrate Croak did not go into the case deeply, declaring the arrests were unjustified.

The final heat of the first race had just been called yesterday afternoon when the judges interfered and arrested the judges, Thomas E. Smith, E. B. Allen, Robert Howard and Charles E. Griffith. Lawrence Chase and E. E. Sneed were the ticket takers arrested. By direction of President Van Clist of the Agricultural Society the crowd of about 5,000 persons was informed by megaphone of the arrests, and it was announced that the races would be finished to-day. Last evening counsel for the society was instructed to appear before a Supreme Court Justice this morning and obtain an injunction restraining the police from interfering with the track events.

The Weather.
The temperature over the Middle Atlantic and New England States and lower lake regions was dry and cool the average for the season yesterday, and due to this coolness, the conditions were cloudy and unsettled.

It was cooler and warmer in Minnesota and Indiana and there were moderate temperature changes in nearly all the extreme Northwest.
